Choosing a Proper Buffer in Capillary Electrophoresis of Proteins

The diverse types and characteristics of proteins makes selecting a proper buffer very challenging. Factors to consider when choosing a buffer for proteins are:

A. The protein's pI and pK's
B. The solubility of the protein
C. The amount of glycosylation
D. The effect pH has on the folding or unfolding of the protein